Understanding how the stress of early adverse experiences can become toxic and impact a child's development and how resiliency factors can buffer the effects of toxic stress are the foundation of trauma-informed schools. This presentation will emphasize how early trauma can impact brain development and implications for learning. An overview of the physical, mental, cognitive and behavioral effects of ACES on children will be examined within a resiliency framework that emphasizes best practices and resources for schools.

ALASKA SCHOOL LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE 2014 LEARNING DESIGN

Rural Alaska Principal Preparation and Support Program

May 28 - 30, 2014

ASLI 2014 will be organized around three content themes: leading the implementation of the new Alaska ELA and Math Standards led by Lexie Domaradzki and Sue Johnson; leading the implementation of the new Alaska ELA Standards led by Shelby Skaanes; and building a high quality system for evaluating educator effectiveness led by Al Bertani. In addition, ASLI 2014 will address foundational understandings about: 1) defining rigor and ambitious instruction using researched-based strategies; and 2) designing professional learning to support high quality standards-based teaching linked to the evaluation of educator effectiveness. Critical friends Conversations and District Team Planning Time will remain important components in the overall learning design.

The Rural Alaska Principal Preparation and Support Project (RAPPS) is a comprehensive leadership development program focused on preparation of principals for rural Alaska schools, and support for those who are currently serving in those schools. The US Department of Education's School Leadership Program funded this 5-year project.

RAPPS provided scholarships to 73 promising practicing teacher-leaders in 16 high-need rural districts so that they could obtain their Type B credential and become principals.

RAPPS offers a complete system of support for aspiring and practicing school leaders including: a distance-delivered, rural-focused cohort within the UAA Educational Leadership Program; mentoring for aspiring principals during their internship with coaches from the Alaska Administrator Coaching Project; and no-cost distance-delivered and face-to-face professional learning opportunities for all staff from the 16 partner districts throughout the year from the Alaska Staff Development Network.

Our major goal was to train and certify 55 new principals and to strengthen the leadership skills of principals from 135 of Alaska's highest need schools. The 2013-24 school year is the last year for grant funding for this initiative.

Project Outcomes

- Sixty-one teacher or central office leaders have completed the program and are certified as school administrators, and eight more are on track to complete and graduate by 2015. Of this group:
  - 28 are currently serving in a site administrator position in a RAPPS district
  - 2 are Assistant Superintendents in a RAPPS district
  - 8 are in central office positions in a RAPPS district
  - 14 are certified and looking for principal positions
  - 6 are continuing to teach
  - 3 moved out of state
- Throughout the five year project period, 15-17 RAPPS interns received coaching each year from the Alaska Administrator Coaching Project. All RAPPS UAA graduates have received coaching services.
- Over 500 school leaders have attended the Alaska School Leadership Institute over the course of the project (duplicated count).
- Over 2,000 registrations (duplicated count) from RAPPS district staff were received for the 29 ASDN/RAPPS webinar series offered over the course of the grant. 123 no-cost webinars were offered in total.
- UAA has created over 15 rural Alaska case studies for use in the Educational Leadership program.

End of Project Evaluation Questions

Target Group: Alaska Staff Development Network

Instructions: Please schedule a time at the Alaska School Leadership Institute to ask these questions with a representative of this organization. These do not need to be extensive responses, but rather main points or ideas. These should take no more than 30 minutes. These questions should be provided to the organization's representative in advance so they can begin to think about their responses prior to the interview.

Representative: _____ Organization: _____

1. How, if at all, have project activities differed from what was originally proposed?
2. What challenges or barriers did the RAPPS Project experience in implementing its activities over the past six years; and how, if at all, has it overcome these challenges or barriers?
3. How has this project contributed to research, knowledge, practice and/or policy?
4. Please describe any unintended outcomes observed as a result of implementation. Were these unintended outcomes helpful and/or problematic?
5. To what extent have retention rates of school leaders improved in RAPPS high-need LEAs?
6. To what extent has support for principals (including assistant principals) improved as a result of RAPPS funding?
7. What are "lessons (you) learned" from implementing the RAPPS project?
8. What are "next steps" for the RAPPS project? Are any parts of the project going to continue beyond the grant period?
9. Any other comments?
